

Nov 2009:

The first substantial rains of the 2009/2010 wet season fell on the 19th of this month. Elephant herds appear to have modified their dry season range a few days prior to this. Most moving south of the Levuvhu River for the first time since we have been monitoring their movements.

Nov 2009:

On the 28th we immobilised Bvekenya, removed the snare he had picked up around his trunk and treated the wound. In his frustration he had also twisted his collar and we were able to correct this at the same time. Over the next couple of days we kept an eye on the elephant and he is doing very well.
